EXHIBITION THEME:

“Inheritance and Immanence: The World We Are Left With”

Now more than ever teens interested and involved in social, political, and environmental issues that the world faces. As young people, these issues were passed on from previous generations but we are affected nonetheless. This exhibition seeks to reflect on the issues in order to examine and create dialogue around what these teens will inherit, the methods by which, teens cope with these issues today, and the steps teens can take to solve these issues as time progresses.

Here are some questions from the Teen Board to help get you started:

How have our parents, grandparents, and predecessors left the world for us?

How do we as teens cope with the situations we are in?

What are the social, environmental, and cultural impacts these issues have on our generation?

What can teens do in the future to help resolve these issues we face (if at all possible?)

What is the relationship between the teens and the issues?

What does our future look/feel like to you?
